PREFACE.

This Catalogue, prepared in accordance with resolutions of the Library Committees of the third and fourth Parliaments, shows the books, pamphlets, pictures, and maps received into the Library from its commencement to September, 1911. It incorporates the Catalogue issued in 1906, but is much fuller, as that Catalogue gave books and maps only, omitting pamphlets and pictures. In addition, there have been added an Author and a Subject Index. The Author Index gives the author and short title of each entry in the main Catalogue, with a reference to the class and page where it may be found, while the Subject Index gives the class and page where the resources of the Library on any particular subject are shown.

The Decimal Classification, devised by Mr. Melvil Dewey, has been retained and extended. A brief description of the system will be found on a subsequent page.

The Committee has continued its policy of devoting special attention to works connected with Australasia. This section has been greatly extended by the acquisition of the Petherick collection, which, however, is not included in this Catalogue.

Although, by means of the system of classification and of the Subject Index, the users of this Catalogue may find, to a large extent, what the Library contains on any particular subject, it is impossible in an Author List of any sort to give such information fully. The Dictionary Catalogue kept on cards in the Library will be found to give any further particulars in this direction that may be required.

I would like to express my obligation to Mr. R. D. Boys of the Public Library, Melbourne, who was good enough to read through the whole Catalogue, both in manuscript and proof, and made many valuable suggestions. I would also thank Mr. J. Kemp, the Government Printer, for many courtesies while the work was passing through the press.

RULES FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF THE LIBRARY OF THE PARLIAMENT OF THE COMMONWEALTH.

As Adopted by the Joint Library Committee.

1. Members may not have on loan from the Library more than six volumes at any one time, and when taking out a book shall report it to an officer of the Library.

2. Books may not be kept for more than seven days, but, except in the case of books inquired for, this rule will not be strictly enforced. Books newly received shall be issued according to priority of application.

3. Works of special value, works of reference, law books, and maps, and, on the direction of the Chairman of the Library Committee, any books likely to be in request in relation to any debate, shall not be removed from the Parliament Buildings.

4. Bound volumes of newspapers shall not be removed from the Library, except to the Chamber of the Senate, or House of Representatives, for use in debate, and shall be returned as soon as done with.

5. The Librarian shall report to the Chairman of the Library Committee any cases in which books held by Members, or others entitled to the use of the Library, have been unduly retained when applied for.

6. Any one entitled to the use of the Library losing or defacing a book shall replace it, or the set, if it form part of a set, to the satisfaction of the Committee.

7. Once in each year the Librarian shall cause an account of stock to be taken, and shall subsequently submit a report to the Library Committee, with a list of the books lost or unduly retained during the year.

8. No magazine, periodical, or weekly newspaper shall be removed from the Library after its arrival until the receipt of the next issue.

9. Except by permission of the Librarian, no stranger shall be admitted to the Library unless accompanied by or having an order from a Member of Parliament.

10. While Parliament is in session persons actually engaged in reporting the proceedings of Parliament may be allowed access to the Library for purposes of reference.

11. The Library shall not be used for the purpose of receiving deputations, for the meetings of Royal Commissions or Select Committees (except the Library Committee), or for meetings of any sort whatever, without the express consent of the Library Committee previously obtained.

12. Any Senator or Member of the House of Representatives of the first Parliament of the Commonwealth shall be entitled for life to all such privileges connected with the Commonwealth Library as are from time to time enjoyed by the sitting Members of the Parliament.

13. The like privileges shall also be enjoyed for life by any person who shall have, for a period of not less than five years, occupied a seat in the Parliament of the Commonwealth, or shall for any period have held office as President, Speaker, or as a Minister of the Crown.

14. Such Officers of Parliament as are approved by the President or Speaker shall be entitled to the use of the Library.

15. Smoking in any part of the Library is prohibited.

16. The Librarian is required to report to the Chairman of the Committee any infringement of these Rules.

17. Any person infringing any of the foregoing Rules is liable to the forfeiture of all privileges connected with the Library.

EXPLANATION OF THE DECIMAL CLASSIFICATION.

"The field of knowledge is divided into nine main classes, which are numbered by the digits, 1 to 9. Cyclopædias, periodicals, &c., so general in character as to belong to no one of these classes, are marked 0, and form a tenth class. Each class is similarly separated into nine divisions, general works belonging to no division having 0 in place of the division number. Divisions are similarly divided into nine sections, and the process is repeated as often as necessary."

Thus of the ten divisions of Class 5, Natural Science, 59 represents Zoology, and is subdivided into 590, General Works; 591, Physiological Zoology; 592, Invertebrates; which are treated in more detail in Classes 593, Protozoans; 594, Molluscs; and 595, Articulates. 596 deals with Vertebrates generally, and 597, 598, 599, treat of Fishes, Reptiles and Birds, and Mammals respectively. Among the subdivisions of 595 is 595·7, Insects, and this again is divided into further subdivisions 595·71 to 595·79, which deal with the different orders of Insects. For instance, Class 595·76 relates to the Coleoptera or Beetles, and in a Library paying special attention to Entomology, this class may be still further subdivided by the addition of more numbers to deal with the genera or species of Beetles as minutely as may be desired.

A feature of the system is a device by which the figures relating to the history of a country may be added to, or combined with, the figures relating to a subject, in order to give a number indicating that subject in reference to that country. Thus, 310 being the number for General Statistics, and 942 that for History of England, the 9 representing the class History is dropped, and also the 0 of 310, denoting its general character; and, the numbers then being combined, Statistics of England would be found under the number 314·2. In the same way the number 994·4 representing History of New South Wales, a like combination gives 319·44 for Statistics of New South Wales, under which number would be placed such a book as Coghlan's Wealth and Progress of New South Wales. So, Geology being 550, and History of Victoria 994·5, works on the Geology of Victoria would be found under the number 559·45.

Two summaries of the system are given here, the first of which shows the classes into which all subjects are divided, and the second the divisions of each of the ten classes. A more minute summary has not been given, but in the Catalogue further subdivision has been carried out to such extent as was found necessary.
